In the Mercantour National Park, there is a surprising problem for natural parks; cohabitation between wild species and man. The Sea cucumber is an animal we know little about. And yet it is the second most exported product from the South Pacific fishing industry. The Grand Connetable Island in French Guiana is home to hundreds of frigate birds. Weighing less than 1.5 kg and boasting a wingspan of 2.3 metres, these seabirds are the best gliders in the world. From April onwards, thousands of gulls, terns and noddies join the frigate birds on this island, the only place in South America conducive to the reproduction of seabirds. The waters surrounding the island are also home to an endangered species of fish: the Atlantic goliath grouper...

Fred Hilgemann Films / Trakovski Films / French Connection / Directed by Dmitry Trakovski and Paloma Veinstein

Languages available: French & English

Broadcasters: M-Media, RTV Slovenija

Decades before scientists recognised the looming dangers of climate change, the elders of one of Alaska's indigenous groups, the Yupik people, shared a warning with their children. "When the world changes", they said, "the weather will change along with the people". Over fifty years later, the impact of climate change is becoming more and more visible in Alaska. How will the Yupik people, who are so close to nature, adapt to the changing natural landscape around them?
